Introduction

This is the report, in which we present the activities of the Institute for Democratic Governance (Globernance), which was created in 2010 as an agent of Science and Technology of the Basque Network of Science, Technology and Innovation. It was created with the aim of carrying out top-level research in the field of humanities and social sciences. Though our research primarily envisages work in the international sphere, we are also at the service of institutions that are closer to us. Through its many research programs, publications and dissemination activities, and through the many cooperation agreements signed to date, the Institute for Democratic Governance has, in spite of its youth, already become a space for reflection and the exchange of knowledge for researchers from all over the world. We wish to begin this report by expressing our gratitude to all those individuals and public and private institutions that support us. This is by no means the final report of an institution that has already fulfilled its task; it is merely the first step in our commitment to the development of science and research, where the values of democratic co-existence are key, and it is part of our greater aim to contribute to the renewal of the forms of government we choose to embrace.

What is ?

GLOBERNANCE

It is a centre for reflection, research and dissemination of knowledge on democratic governance.

the Institute for Democratic Governance?

Since 2010

The Institute for Democratic Governance was created in 2010 by a group of researchers led by Professors Daniel Innerarity and Juan José Álvarez to investigate, share and disseminate knowledge about democratic governance, with the aim of offering a greater understanding of the reality of contemporary society and contributing to innovative forms of government

It carries out numerous research activities, including workshops, courses and lectures on the many different aspects of the concept of governance in its political, economic and legal dimensions.

The areas of research include new forms of governance, the regulation of markets, the internal organization of enterprises, administrative reform and the role of law in a global context.

A priority:

The study of the relationship between state, market, society

The study of governance implies analysing the complexity of the triangle formed by the state, the economy and society or, if one prefers, the intricate set-up of hierarchy, market and networks.

The concept of governance refers to a profound change in social action and the forms of governance applied by contemporary societies in a context marked by globalization, Europeanization and interdependence. We are witnessing a transformation of democracies, which are becoming less hierarchical and more and more obliged to cooperate with each other.

Collaborating institutions

The objective: political and social innovation

The challenge of governance lies in understanding and managing the processes of communication and cooperation within a realm occupied by agents whose actions are interrelated and interdependent.

The concept of governance appears today as the possibility of saving political power from ineffectiveness and insignificance, of giving new meaning to politics and of effecting a deep transformation of it.

Collaborating with institutions and companies

Globernance is funded by public institutions and private companies alike

This laboratory of ideas is at the service of social agents, both political and economic, that demand training and information. This makes our Institute a veritable guidance tool that informs strategies and areas of work and commitment.

To this end, our Institute vouches for networking and collaboration with many different institutions.

Who are we ?

"A group of researchers who got together in January 2010 with the aim of promoting research on democratic governance, with a sharp eye on the current socio-political context, which must be properly grasped and looked upon as the acute confluence of global society and knowledge based society".

What do we do?

Globernance activities as organizer

The Institute for Democratic Governance was established in September 2010. Throughout that year, as initial work, the project “Governance in the knowledge-based Society” was launched. To this end, several activities that are also contemplated therein were organised.

Research on global governance in regional networks for innovation and the competitiveness of businesses

Date: June 9-11, 2010

The first scientific paper by Miren Estensoro and Miren Larrea stemming from this research work was presented at the EUNIP (European Network on Industrial Policy) Congress in Reus.

Date: October 14-15, 2010

The second paper entitled “Regional Innovation Policy Bottom Up: The Role of Proximity Networks and the Engaged Research” was presented at the 5th International Seminar on Regional Innovation Policies in Grimstad, Norway. It was written by Mari Jose Aranguren and Miren Larrea, researchers at Orkestra.

Research work done by Orkestra and Globernance, in collaboration with the Government of Spain (Ministry of Science and Innovation).

Orkestra, in collaboration with Globernance, did further research on territorial networks for innovation and competitiveness. Networks based on public-private partnerships that are designed as spaces for reflection and learning that bring together agents of competitiveness from each territorial field and which have, in varying degrees, the mechanisms necessary for the implementation their reflections. This work has broached the issue of governance from two different perspectives:

- (1) territorial networks for innovation and competitiveness;
- (2) the policy changes required in the new modes of governance.

Seminar: Governing the Global Risks

Date: October 6 – 7, 2010

Venue: House of Peace and Human Rights. San Sebastián

GLOBERNANCE

INSTITUTE FOR DEMOCRATIC GOVERNANCE

www.globernance.org

Organized by: Globernance and Orkestra – Basque Institute of Competitiveness

This seminar was directed by Daniel Innerarity and 14 speakers of different nationalities participated, among them Javier Solana, President of the Center for Global Economy and Geopolitics at ESADE. The aim was to reflect upon future global risks of various kinds (climate change, security threats, food and health problems, financial crisis, etc.) that affect the political agenda in each country

One of the main conclusions was that to prevent global risks it is necessary to devise new political strategies aimed at anticipating such risks. The speakers noted that the current economic crisis shows that modern societies do not have the right tools to prevent and manage the systemic risks and irrational linkages of our actions

Seminar: Participation and Communication in the new European Governance

Date: December 1 – 2, 2010
Venue: House of Peace and Human Rights (San Sebastián)
Organized by: Globernance

This seminar was directed by Susana del Rio and it brought together researchers and institutional representatives to discuss the reasons for the lack of interest of citizens in the European Community project and to attempt to define elements that can help overcome the concerns, doubts and uncertainties facing the European Union in the wake of the institutional crisis arising out of economic governance and the crisis of the euro.

The purpose of the seminar was to analyze the double dimension of participation and communication within the European Union and the factors that are key to overcoming the indifference of citizens towards the community project, as well as new communication resources to allow for meaningful communication between Europe and its citizens

Opening of the series of debates on: “European colour”

Date: May 17, 2011

Venue: San Telmo Museum (STM)

Organizad by: Globernance and STM

Susana del Río is behind the creative idea and is also the Academic Director of this project. “European Colour” is a series of debates within a line of work developed in conjunction with the San Telmo Museum, in San Sebastian. The first debate entitled “European Parliament: connection with citizens and transparency” was attended by Jaume Duch, spokesman of the European Parliament and media director. It was an event in which participants reflected upon how to make the idea of Europe interesting to the public, how to earn legitimacy and the role of the media in projecting the concept of Europe.

In addition, several bloggers shared their projects and discussed the level of information saturation that exists today and the consequences of it.

International conference: Human rights as a hallmark of European policies

Date: June 8-9-10, 2011

Venue: House of Peace and Human Rights (San Sebastián)

Organized by: Globernance

In collaboration with: The Human Rights Effectiveness Research Centre HURIERC (one of twelve research groups involved in the HURI-AGE project, led by Prof. Gregorio Peces-Barba and coordinated by The Bartolomé de las Casas Human Rights Institute of the Universidad Carlos III, Madrid).

Led by researcher Ignacio Aymerich, the objective of the Conference was to evaluate the public policies espoused by European countries from the second half of the 20th century to today, in order to determine whether human rights is an element that can be said to be distinctive of Europe on the international scene.

With this aim, the primary theme of the congress was formulated around three points of focus: linking cooperation policies to the development of human rights; the responsibility of states and European companies in the promotion of human rights; and the guarantee of social rights as a European differential factor.

The Minister for Public Administration and Justice (The Basque Government) Mrs. Idoia Mendia, opened this international meeting. A book containing all the papers will be published. The event was attended by 19 experts/speakers of different nationalities.

The debate could also be followed via Internet.

Organized by: Gubernance and ACOP (Political Communication Association)

Directed by Mikel Cabello, the goal of the conference was to inform about Political Governance, its foundations and the future and immediate challenges that lie ahead, both globally and in our immediate environment. Among the participants were Andoni Aldekoa, Director of the Office of the Mayor of Bilbao Mr. Iñaki Azcuna, and Chris Arterton, former Dean of the Graduate School of Political Management at The George Washington University.

The one-day encounter unfolded as a journey from the theoretical analysis necessary for the understanding of the general conceptual framework, to the detailed explanation of a model of practical governance implemented. The situation of the European political project was also analyzed, as were the international training experiences based in the U.S.

International conference: Internet and the future of democracy

Date: December 19 – 20, 2011

Venue: Basque Parliament, in Vitoria

Organized by: Globernance and the Basque Parliament

Directed by researcher Serge Champeau, the aim of the International Conference "Internet and the future of democracy", opened by the President of the Basque Parliament, Mrs. Arantza Quiroga, was to explore the metamorphosis that the media are undergoing as a result of the emergence of digital media, and to analyze the consequences of this transformation on the public sphere.

Should we talk about an extension or a fragmentation of the public sphere? What is the nature of the new relationships between citizens, experts and politics? How do we imagine the future of the Internet, its technical evolution, governance of the Internet and its impact on politics and culture? ... These were some of the questions the speakers tried to answer in the course of two days.

A book with all the papers will be published.

Dialogues for the quality of democracy

Date: January 17, 2012

Venue: House of Peace and Human rights (San Sebastián)

Organized by: Fundación Ernest Lluch and Gubernance.

The project “Dialogues” aims at promoting dialogue as an essence of pure democracy, of the non-belligerent human drive. With this belief, throughout 2011 the Fundación Ernest Lluch has organised 10 dialogues among well-known figures from the field of economics, culture, university and politics, in order to reflect upon these subjects from different perspectives. In the event held in San Sebastián, on the one side, the conclusions of the “Dialogues” project were presented and on the other side, a panel discussion was organised to address the quality of democracy with the sociologists Joaquín Arango and Javier Elzo and the philosopher Daniel Innerarity. The participants reflected upon the democracy deficits, its functional legitimacy, the power division and the poor significance of public interest.

In collaboration with: the University Jaume I of Castellón, the Instituto Suizo de Derecho comparado, Agencia Vasca de Protección de datos, Kutxa, Grupo IT-496-10 AND IT-448-07.

The main objective of the Congress was to check the evolution of the Fundamental Rights from the perspectives of the private international law, the constitutional law, the European law and the comparative law, dedicating special attention to the Suisse model. With this aim, the major theme of the Congress was articulated around two axes: multiculturalism and fundamental rights, internet and protection mechanisms for fundamental rights against possible infringements.

Diagnostic report for the promotion of the citizen participation in the Provincial Council of Bizkaia

Date: Drafted throughout 2012 and presented in October.

We are in a situation where the political power is subordinated to the financial power that has the advantage to adapt itself rapidly to these transformations, accelerating them and leaving the regulation instruments working with an unbeatable slowness. For this reason, politics are forced to undergo transformations and be more intelligent. And one of those transformations is closely related to the willingness of the citizens to participate in politics.

Politics are pressed by citizens more and more demanding, requiring transparency, and information and, on many occasions, demanding a greater intervention in the decision-making process. Those who have political responsibilities must never lose sight of the fact that there are in front of mature citizens aware of their right to participate in the political decision-making process and, in any case, of their right to demand accountability to their democratically elected representatives.

This has been the starting point of this diagnostic report which has helped us to define for the Provincial Council a governance model for citizen’s participation. This model takes specific form in each decision-making process heading towards an increasing scale of opening and participation alongside the public policies definition time cycle. Transparency, proactive information, deliberative processes, mechanisms to reach agreements and consensus which give a greater democratic legitimacy, the consultative or non-consultative character of the process, etc....are some of the aspects to be considered when designing a participation process oriented towards decision-making.

Further information

Summary 2010-2011-2012

1. Conventions

One of the pillars of Gubernance activity is to open channels of collaboration through agreements with various agencies and institutions.

The aim is greater opening with a view to drawing upon the knowledge of others for the on-going benefit of all.

Since the establishment of Gubernance, part of our work has been aimed at making our institute well-known and to expanding our network of collaborators.

Since its birth, Gubernance has signed agreements with:

- The University of the Basque Country (UPV-EHU) and The City Council of Donostia-San Sebastián
- Ikerbasque
- The San Telmo Museum
- The Carlos Santamaría Centre (UPV/EHU)
- Euskaltel
- The Ernest Lluch Foundation
- Digital Vasca (Annual Digital Citizenship conference)
- The Bosch i Gimpera-GISME Foundation
- Editorial Paidós
- Kontuz! Project (Los límites del principio de precaución en la praxis ético-jurídica contemporánea - MINECOFFI2011-24414)

2. Gubernance Publications

One of the most visible lines of Gubernance activity is its work in the realm of publications. Most of the research work, reflections and papers presented in different forums are put together in different publications for further dissemination in different languages.

- “La humanidad amenazada: gobernar los riesgos globales” [Humanity is threatened: governing global risks]. July 2011. This work, edited by Daniel Innerarity and Javier Solana, contains the sixteen papers presented at the seminar. French version “Risques globaux et gouvernance mondiale” Presses Universitaires. Bordeaux, 2013 (English version currently being prepared).
- “La democracia del conocimiento. Por una sociedad inteligente” [The democracy of knowledge. For an intelligent society]. October 2011. The author of this work, Daniel Innerarity, develops the thesis that knowledge and what surrounds it are areas where not only economic prosperity is decided but is, fundamentally, what constitutes the very essence of democratic quality.
- “Internet y el futuro de la democracia” [Internet and the future of democracy]. September 2012. Publishers: Serge Champeau and Daniel Innerarity. The articles of this volume aim at analysing the debates arising from the four major problems about the relationships between internet and democracy. The first problem addressed is the one of measuring, with the perspective we have, the effects of the use of Web 2.0 on the democratic political practices. The second problem is the one of the limits between the private and public sphere in the digital era. The third problem
